Indian Army Rejects China's Claim of 50km Occupation in Arunachal, Citing Disinformation

New Delhi – In a statement released on Wednesday, the Indian Army categorically rejected the claim that China has occupied a 50km area in Arunachal Pradesh. The assertion was described as part of a coordinated disinformation campaign aimed at destabilizing public opinion and the diplomatic environment.

The statement noted that there is no concrete evidence or reliable intelligence to support any such territorial gain. The Army stated that its troops are continuously monitoring the Line of Actual Control (LAC) and that the situation remains unchanged.

This clarification comes amid rising border tensions with China, particularly following recent high-altitude confrontations. Officials urged the public to rely on official information and avoid spreading unverified news on social media.

The Ministry of Defence offered no additional comment beyond the Army's statement.

Arunachal Tribal Leader Reiterates Claims of Chinese Encroachment, Demands Action from Centre

The tribal leader publicly stated that China has encroached into Indian territory in certain border areas. He highlighted reports from local residents and border personnel indicating unauthorized movements beyond the Line of Actual Control (LAC). In a statement, he urged the Ministry of Defence and

Factly: Viral Video of Lt. Gen. Katiyar on China’s Invasion in Arunachal is AI-Generated

A viral video on social media shows retired Lt. Gen. Manoj Kumar Katiyar voicing concern over China’s military incursion in Arunachal Pradesh, but Factly has confirmed that the clip is fabricated. The fact-checking organisation verified that the video was AI-manipulated and does not represent the general’s real statements.

The content gained significant traction, spreading misinformation about the security situation in the border region. Factly’s analysis revealed that the video was created using artificial intelligence tools, making the general’s voice and appearance appear authentic.

Experts advised the public to verify such sensitive geopolitical claims through official channels before sharing. The incident highlights the growing challenge of deep-fake technology in disseminating misleading information on national security matters.

Arunachal Groups Demand Immediate Action from Centre After Exposing Chinese Infiltration

In Arunachal Pradesh, multiple civic organisations and local bodies have written to the Home Ministry, urging immediate action following a statement by the Indian-Tibetan Border Police (ITBP) chief. The ITBP chief alleged that Chinese forces have repeatedly infiltrated the state’s border. The groups argue that such incursions threaten regional security and call for strengthened patrols, surveillance and diplomatic measures. They request that the centre prioritise the issue and respond swiftly in coordination with the Indian Army. The appeal comes amid escalating tensions on the India-China border and heightened local concern for safety. The government has yet to issue an official response, but the groups will continue monitoring the situation and demand concrete steps.

Congress seeks clarification from Reijju on Arunachal SUMP project

Congress has expressed concern in the Lok Sabha, demanding clarification from Reijju regarding its silence on the Arunachal State Urban Management Project (SUMP). The party has asked the minister to clarify the project's progress, sources of funding, and implementation timeline. SUMP is a flagship initiative aimed at improving urban infrastructure and governance in Arunachal Pradesh. The central government has presented a comprehensive framework, but details regarding resource allocation and participation of state agencies remain unclear. Congress leaders argue that transparency is essential for the project's success and have requested a detailed update from the minister. They also demanded the formation of a joint parliamentary committee to monitor implementation and ensure accountability. Reijju has yet to respond to these questions, prompting the opposition to intensify scrutiny of the project's management. The issue has become a key point in the ongoing debate over the state's development priorities.

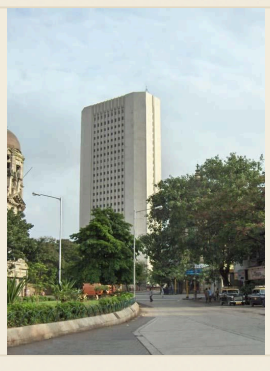
RBI warns: No new chequebook rules from January 2027



The Reserve Bank of India (RBI) has issued an official warning stating that no new rules related to chequebooks will be implemented from January 2027. The bank said that existing guidelines will remain unchanged and that no additional compliance requirements are needed for that date.

and fintech platforms to be cautious of misinformation circulating regarding changes to chequebooks. The institution requested all parties to rely solely on official RBI notifications for any new regulations.

This clarification came amid speculation spreading on social media and messaging apps, where some users claimed that banks would be required to issue electronic-only chequebooks or that fees would increase. The RBI stated that such claims are baseless and that customers can continue to use chequebooks under current rules.

Financial analysts believe the RBI's proactive communication is intended to prevent confusion and protect consumers from potential fraud. While the bank is promoting digital payments, it has not yet ordered the complete phase-out of traditional chequebooks.
