Meghalaya CM Conrad Sangma Launches MeghGo, the State's First Integrated Mobility App

Shillong – The Meghalaya government unveiled its first integrated mobility platform, MeghGo, in the presence of Chief Minister Conrad Sangma. The app consolidates real-time information for buses, taxis, and shared rides into a single interface, making it easier for passengers to plan trips, book tickets, and track vehicles.

The launch underscores the state's commitment to promoting digital solutions in public transport, a challenge long plagued by fragmented services and limited access in hilly regions. Officials said the app will initially cover major routes in Shillong before expanding to other districts.

MeghGo is expected to enhance passenger convenience, reduce waiting times, and help planners optimize routes and schedules using data. The service will be maintained and updated in partnership with local tech companies, bolstering the state's smart city initiatives.

The app is now available for download on both Android and iOS platforms, with free registration open to all residents. Features such as fare integration and multilingual support will be refined based on usage patterns and feedback.

This initiative represents a significant step in Meghalaya's digital transformation agenda, aligning with national efforts to modernize transport infrastructure through technology.

Meghalaya Bus Drivers Plan Peaceful Rally Against Depot Eviction

Bus drivers across Meghalaya have recently announced plans to organize a peaceful rally in protest against eviction notices. The initiative is being coordinated by the state's drivers' union, which states that the evictions could jeopardize the livelihoods of hundreds of transport workers.

Drivers claim that the eviction orders were issued under a redevelopment plan that does not provide alternative facilities or adequate compensation. Without suitable locations, removal from the depots will disrupt services for daily commuters and threaten job security for many families.

Local authorities said they are reviewing the drivers' concerns and have appealed for the rally to remain peaceful. Officials stated that discussions are ongoing to find a solution, but no concrete proposal has been offered yet.

The rally aims to draw public attention to the issue and pressure the government into reaching an agreement that protects the rights of both the transport network and the workers.

Meghalaya HC adjourns illegal coal mining case to November 30

The Meghalaya High Court has postponed the hearing of the case related to illegal coal mining in the state. The court has scheduled the next hearing for November 30 due to the delay in the state government's report. This development comes as the court grapples with the issue of illegal mining in Meghalaya, which has led to environmental and social consequences.

John Abraham appeals to Meghalaya tourists: 'Please keep it clean'

Popular Bollywood actor John Abraham recently appealed to tourists during his visit to Meghalaya to keep the state clean. Speaking at a local gathering, he advised visitors not to litter in public places and to respect the environment.

He noted that Meghalaya's famous waterfalls, living root bridges, and limestone caves are fragile ecosystems that can be damaged by careless behavior. "For heaven's sake, don't dirty the place," he said, stressing the need for responsible tourism.

The actor also mentioned that India's largest football stadium is set to be built in Meghalaya soon, but cautioned that infrastructure development should not come at the cost of environmental damage.

State tourism officials welcomed Abraham's message, stating that ongoing cleanliness drives and awareness programs would be further strengthened by the star's support. They urged all domestic and international travelers to adhere to local waste management rules.

The appeal comes amid a growing influx of tourists to Meghalaya, serving as a reminder to all who enjoy this natural heritage of the importance of cleanliness.

Meghalaya bans trucks over 28.5 tonnes from using new Umiakam bridge

Meghalaya's transport authorities have issued an immediate ban on all trucks weighing more than 28.5 tonnes from using the newly constructed Umiakam bridge. The bridge connects Shillong city to surrounding districts, and a weight limit was applied as soon as it opened, as officials stated it is necessary for structural stability.

The step was taken by the state Public Works Department on the advice of engineering experts who inspected the bridge during a testing phase. They warned that excessive weight could shorten the bridge's lifespan and put passenger safety at risk.

Police and highway patrol teams will check the weight of trucks at the bridge entrances and divert overweight vehicles to alternative routes. Transport companies have been instructed to modify their logistics plans, while the government said it will strictly monitor compliance.

structural assessment is complete, after which the weight limit may be adjusted based on expert recommendations.
